

Texas Wildflowers to Know

Texas Bluebonnets

Bumblebees and honeybees buzzing all day long, this nectar treat is not complete without their honeybee song.

Indian Blanket

Seas of Indian Blankets look like fiery summer skies, when they bloom, watch for the moon, then behold the fireflies!

Plains Coreopsis

This small yellow flower is a nectar source for many, a dye source for others, and it only costs a penny.

Texas Bluebells

So fine and appealing is the Bluebell, it's the name of an ice cream as well! Such a treat though much more discreet, for all the insects out looking for sweets.

Black-Eyed Susan

The nectar source of this flower is truly a delight, but the Black-Eyed Susan's power lies within its colors bright.

Lemon Mint

Looking for a citrus hint? Maybe you need lemon mint! Purple flowers, healing powers, striking lemon scent.

Purple Coneflower

While a Purple Coneflower grows from a seed, its community fulfills its every need. With water, sunshine, air and space, and all the warmth of nature's grace!

Annual Winecup

From the mallow family comes this purple petaled power. Yellow stamens, lively petals light up this violet flower.

Prairie Verbena

Though rain and dew are very few, your sturdy blooms are always true. Beauty, grace, this colorful shower reminds us of every Texas flower.
